

Your 3 Question Reading

Question 1: I have someone at work who I don't trust. Her name is Faith Stephenson. She reminds me of an old friend who betrayed me. Am I right about her or is the fact that she reminds me of someone else making me suspicious?

You are right to feel suspicious of this person. I don't get that there is any malicious intent in her - she's not mean-spirited by nature, but she seems to be very ambitious and will not hesitate to step on you if it serves her purposes. Don't cross her, but do keep all your dealings with her documented so that she can't take advantage of your good nature.

Question 2: Should I stay where I'm working or move on?

You look like you are in the right place. I see a raise coming in the next few months, and another raise or bonus in about 6 months. You may well be traveling with your job at this time and it is work you find very satisfying and enjoyable. It will bring more income and security. In about 10 months I see you starting a new project or you may move to a new job where the money is even better. You are in the right place right now to have this all unfold. For your future, I see you doing work that you love and been paid well for it since you do such a good job.

Question 3: I don't know where I stand with my boyfriend. He says that he wants to support my work but then every time I have to go out of town he gets sick and I feel torn. His name is David Emery, we live in Chicago. What do I need to know about all this?

It looks from here that this is something that will sort itself out all by itself before long. You are in a world where the rules are changing and only you can decide how to make it all work well. Since you are a strong and competent woman, your happy home life will depend on having a partner who is okay with that. He is struggling with the knowledge that to keep you in his life, he has to be okay with that. Give him a bit of time. You'll know within the next month if he is strong enough to let you excel.
